

BTS CAGES

Your gear, on your phone

Everything BTS is holding for you — what it is, where it is, and whether it's still on the shelf. Included with your cage.

What this is

Every case, pallet and lens BTS holds for you is on a label with a QR code. Scan one with your phone and you see what it is and exactly where it is. No app to install, no password to remember, and it's included with the cage — there's nothing extra to buy.

> The one thing worth knowing
>
> You can look from anywhere. Checking gear in and out only happens at the warehouse — that way the record always matches what physically moved, which is what makes it worth anything when a case goes missing.

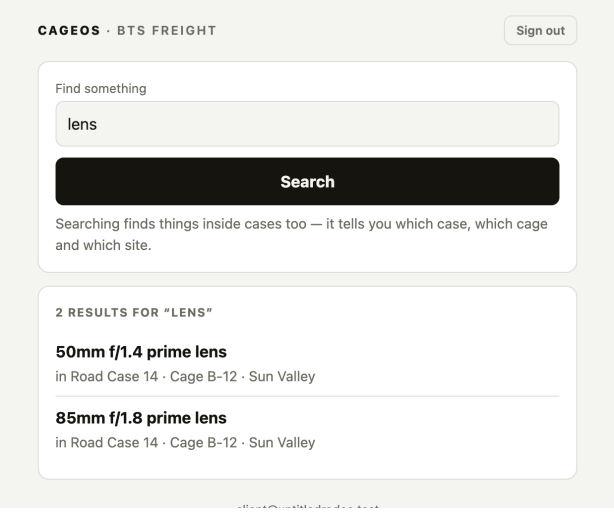

Signing in

1. Go to `cage.btsfreight.com` — or scan the QR on your cage door.
2. Type your email address.
3. We email you a one-time code. Enter it.

That's it. No password to set, forget or share. If your email isn't recognised, ask your BTS contact to add you — it takes them about ten seconds.

Finding something

This is the thing people use most. Type what you're looking for — it searches inside cases too, so you'll find a lens nobody ever labelled individually.

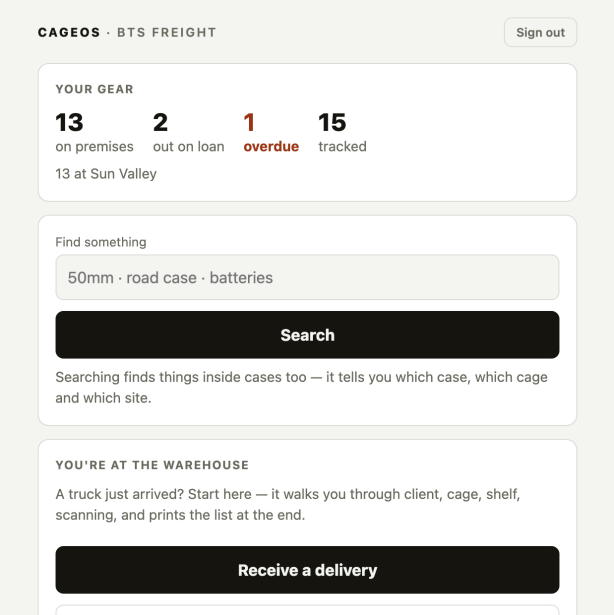

Searching “lens” finds both primes and tells you the case, the cage and the site holding them.

> “Is my 50mm in Burbank?”
>
> That's the question this answers in one line: 50mm f/1.4 prime lens — in Road Case 14 · Cage B-12 · Sun Valley. The lens has no label of its own; it came in on a packing list.

Your dashboard

The home screen answers “what have I got and where is it” before you ask anything.

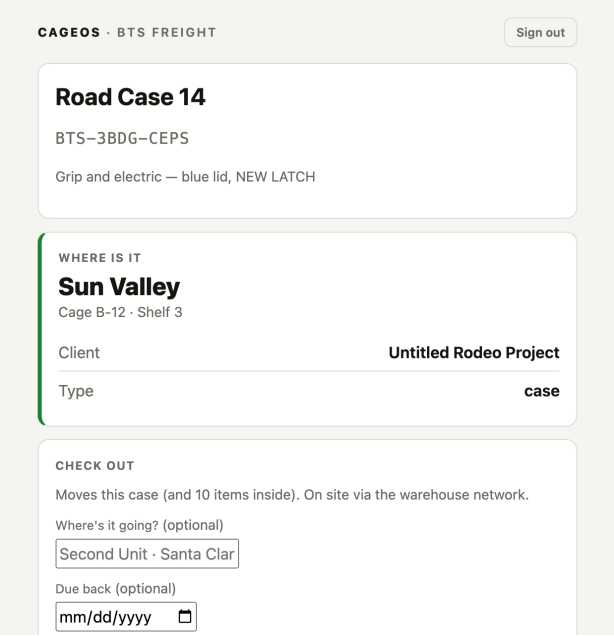

On premises, out on loan, anything overdue, and your cages.

At a glance

- On premises — what's physically on the shelf right now.
- Out on loan — what has left, and whether any of it is late.
- Tracked — every line, including things inside cases.
- Your cages — tap one to walk it shelf by shelf.

Looking at one item

Scan its label, or tap it in a search result. The page leads with where it is — not a table of fields.

Green means it's on the shelf. Red means it's out, with who has it and when it's due.

Checking in and out

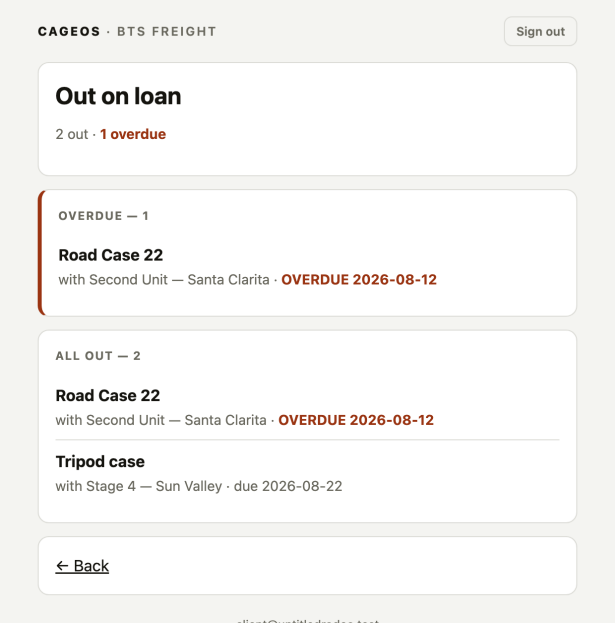

At the warehouse, the item page shows a single button. Checking out a case takes everything inside it with it — scan one label, not forty-seven.

You can record where it's going and when it's due back. That due date is what makes it show up as overdue later; without one it's simply an open-ended loan.

Off site, you'll see "view only"

Deliberate. Gear moves in and out at the warehouse, so that's where it gets recorded. A movement logged from somewhere else would put a time and a name on something nobody witnessed — which is worse than no record at all. Searching, photos and editing details all still work from anywhere.

What's out, and what's late

Everything on loan, soonest due first. Anything overdue is pinned to the top.

Adding and editing

Anything you can see, you can correct — from anywhere:

- Rename a case, fix a description, set a category.
- Declared value, so your total is right for insurance.
- Contents — upload or paste your packing list and every line becomes searchable. No extra labels needed.
- Photos — condition at check-in, or damage. Location data is stripped automatically.

> Contents are optional, always
>
> Some clients itemise every case; most don't bother for bulk gear. A case with no contents list says “contents not tracked” — never “empty”. That difference matters if there's ever a claim.

Common questions

Do I need an app?

No. It's a web page — any phone, any browser. Add it to your home screen if you like.

Can my whole crew have access?

Yes, at no extra cost. Give BTS their email addresses and they're in.

Can other clients see my gear?

No. You only ever see your own. That's enforced on every single request, not just hidden in the interface.

Can I get my list as a spreadsheet?

Yes — Export CSV on the home screen, any time. It's your data.

What if a label gets destroyed?

Every label also carries a printed code like `BTS-7F3K-9QZ2`. Read it out to BTS and they'll find it, or print a replacement.
